Comments	Subsequent to my last email earlier this afternoon, I have now had the opportunity to explore the site of the demolished cottages with the remaining drain in place. It is NOT opposite 7,6,5,4 Hook Lane, the proposed development site, but in the middle of the woods way beyond number 12, along the footpath and on the right. The drain photographed as evidence of the last remnant of the cottages is clearly evident from the footpath in the woods. How can someone build new properties 400m away from the site of the demolition of the old properties?
