Comments	There are many people, more so during COVID lockdown, that rely on the remaining green areas in Hatfield for their personal mental well being. I feel that this is just another step in eroding the availability of those green areas. it is wrong to nibble away at those areas - eventually there will be none left - at what point is this going to stop? Any further erosion of those green areas will also impact on the flora and fauna in the area. There are birds in the Ellenbrook Park which can not be seen in any other local areas. Society continues to become less in contact with Nature - allowing further building on what remains of the former BAe site will just exacerbate that. I believe that any further building on this land will be short sighted - developers do not appreciate the value of nature and the positive effect it has on those who use it. I oppose any further development in this area.
