Comments	I think it's awful to build a group of ugly modern houses in the middle of a beautiful area, & laying the area open to another 'little' group of houses. So spreads the urbanisation of London - obliterating the Greenbelt that was set up to stop such general spreading of concrete. Without the establishment of the Greenbelt, we might already have been part of one of the hugest metropolises in the world that could have spread for miles - thank goodness our forbears had the sense to establish a way to stop this. Now this generation is trying to ignore this & allow the spreading of conurbations out through our beautiful green fields just for the sake of money!!! MONEY IS NOT THE IMPORTANT THING HERE, BUT OUR ENVIRONMENT. I had thought with all the media coverage of the destruction being caused by single use plastic, people would be more tuned in to our environment & trying to stop pollution - this is just pollution in a different form - concrete! PLEASE REFUSE THIS
