What a disgrace to be removing the solar panels from the build. All new housing should, by law, have to install solar panels. Over their lifetime they will more than pay for themselves AND help to save the planet! On top of that, it will be cheaper to install them during the build as all internal wiring and external and internal fixings can be more easily carried out and they can get the component parts in bulk as well. This is a no-brainer compared to the expense and disruption of doing a post build install. What are this dreadful company thinking about?? I have solar panels installed on my roof and they have halved my electricity bill and I get cash back though Feed-in Tariffs. It cost 6500 to install and will have paid for itself within 10 years. I'm sure Taylor Woodrow could do all 30 homes in bulk for a much lower price. Regards, Adrian Tyler
