Comments	This is development 'by stealth'. They have their permission which they argued in 2019 gave sufficient profit to restore Northaw House. Property prices have increased substantially since 2019 so why this increase in units? If the developer now considers there is insufficient profit in the development, why do they not simply sell the property for someone else, perhaps an individual who wishes to make it their home, or another developer who can make the existing permission 'pay' for the restoration of Northaw House? Granting this permission sets a dangerous precedent Why has Northaw House fallen into a state of 'dilapidation'. It has had scaffolding up for years, why? It is an offence to allow a listed property to fall into such a state, google 'Grade II listed building dilapidated state'. It is a move which can lead to the requirement to eventually demolish the building. Action needs to be taken! There are no exceptional circumstances for this ribbon development of the green belt.
