Comments	<input type="text" value="These plans are totally out of sync with any of our towns ethos. How can in this day and age only .37- .50 of parking spaces be allocated to the plot it will cause infighting for the people living there? How come none of them are larger property's are you only aiming at young people working in London? I do understand that the council has to agree a large amount of new build set by central government and this plot as it's already built on is classed as brown fill, but there has to be a better less dense (and yes less profit for the builder) way of hitting a few more of this towns garden city ethos.
