Comments	<input type="text" value="The recent, previous development of the local area was already wholly out of ouch with the Garden City ethos - creating large whitewashed apartment blocks that not only appear ugly but create a ghetto type feel. Any further development along these lines only exacerbates the issue. I also object that it feels as if though the developer is trying to apply for taller buildings, which again appear to be outside the Garden City planning guidelines. It feels like one planning rule for large developers and another for those of us that develop our properties to the guidelines and conservation rules"/>
