| Comments | <input type="text" value="Our town is loved by many, we have the most beautiful garden like feel, that is what attracts people here and the proposal to erect high rise buildings is completely goes against that. Build houses, people need nature and gardens for their emotional and physical well-being. They do not need to be stacked upon each other. This is unsustainable development that is outdated and unnecessary, there are not even plans to erect sufficient solar power units the blocks or green walls or extra schooling/doctors. A rethink needs to happen, accross the board. This is not what people want long term, this does not lead to a better future for us or our planet. Plus, the developers don't even live here so they have no reason other than financial gain to build these buildings, don't pretend we have a housing shortage that can be resolved by cramming people into artificial environments, we have a shortage of people in power willing to make housing and land accessible to all, a shortage of nature."/> |
