Comments	<input type="text" value="Welwyn Garden City was a pioneering town built with sufficient industrial and other employment possibilities for its resident population. It was also intended to be a town in which the residents' quality of life was enhanced by low density housing in buildings on a human scale. This application is as far from those aims as it is possible to be, as not only does it seek to cram people into dwellings at a greater density than the Garden Cities were built to alleviate but the height and massing of the buldings would adversely affect residents for many miles around."/>
